Re: House Bill 2379, tuition organizations; corporate tax credits

Dear Speaker Weiers:

Today I vetoed House Bill 2379, another bill that is part of the package of bills that make up the Legislature's first FY 2006 budget. Unlike the remainder of the bills in that package, House Bill 2379 was not transmitted to me until today, although my reasons for vetoing it are identical to those set forth in my veto messages on each of the other 16 FY 2006 budget bills that reached my desk on March 21, 2006.

In January, I gave the legislature a fiscally responsible balanced budget that moved Arizona forward by investing in education (from kindergarten to our community colleges and universities), health care, public safety, and our natural resources, without raising taxes or draining the rainy day fund. My budget expanded voluntary full day kindergarten so that 10,000 more Arizona children could enter first grade ready to learn. It invested in a new medical school to increase the number of doctors serving our ever-growing population. It also restored the Department of Water Resources to allow it to deal effectively with water conservation and drought planning as we enter the ninth year of the drought.

In fact, if the legislature had adopted my budget with the revised revenue forecasts we all agree are appropriate, the state would be anticipating a more than $300 million surplus at the end of FY 06.

Unfortunately, the budget you have sent me does not do these things. Instead, it offers a host of false choices: between paying teachers better and expanding all-day kindergarten; between tax cuts for businesses and a new medical school to generate the doctors we will need to accommodate the state's growth; and between protecting Arizona's children and paying immediate cash for long term capital expenses, like school construction. In truth, we can pay our teachers better and offer more children all-day kindergarten. We can build a new medical school and provide economically beneficial tax relief to our businesses. And we can invest in both the safety of our children and the fiscally prudent construction of new schools.

As has become all too familiar, the legislature's budget is balanced on the backs of Arizona children through per capita reductions in childcare, child protective services, children's services, and juvenile corrections. It hurts public safety by failing to fund needed corrections officer salary increases or the recommendations of the Blue Ribbon Panel; and rather than ending with a surplus, it raids the rainy day fund. We did not have to make cuts or false choices of this nature two years ago when we had a billion dollar deficit, and we certainly should not make them today.

Despite this budget's shortcomings, I recognize and appreciate the work that the legislature has devoted to produce it. I am confident that with continued effort and better cooperation, a budget can be reached that not only invests responsibly in our future, but also provides sensible and economically beneficial tax relief.

Working together, we can create a comprehensive package of budget bills for FY 2006 that will move Arizona forward. Until such a complete package of bills is ready, however, I am unwilling to sign any of the individual FY 2006 budget bills you have submitted.

Yours very truly,
